

We absolutely understand that your loved ones are likely to come first and be your priority when writing your Will.

But just a little of what's left, once they've been provided for, would help us continue to provide our valuable services for years to come.

If you decide to leave a gift in your Will and would like to let us know then please do, and of course you have the unreserved right to change your mind at any time.

How to leave a gift in your Will

Three simple ways to make a difference.

Residuary legacy

This is a share – or possibly even all – of the balance of your estate, once all other payments have been made (eg. lifetime debts, tax, administrative expenses and any pecuniary and specific legacies).

Pecuniary legacy

You may prefer to leave us a fixed amount of money. If you are considering a cash gift, please do consider inflation proofing the legacy.

Specific legacy

This would be a gift of a specific item – such as personal possessions, land, buildings or shares.

Make sure your wishes are known

We know it can be easy to put off, but writing your Will is essential to ensure your loved ones and the causes you care about are taken care of exactly how you wish.

If you already have a Will there is no need to create one from scratch – you can make a simple change by adding a codicil.

*Improving life
after brain injury*

Leaving us a gift in your Will

Things to consider

Our mission is to promote understanding of all aspects of brain injury and to provide information, support and services to survivors, their families and carers

We have a day rehabilitation centre at Credenhill where we create tailored programmes to help regain confidence and practical life skills through a range of therapies and outreach services

We are profoundly grateful to anyone who supports us, however they choose to do so. A third of our income is gained from donations and fundraising. A gift in your Will really doesn't have to be large to make a difference. Anything you leave can play a big part in our future services.
